The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 32-39 and 43 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Tramontano et al., for reasons of record set forth in Paper No. 15, mailed 7 May 2003.

In the amendment filed 11 August 2003, Applicants argue that the method of making the claimed antibodies as recited in the claims differs from that taught in Tramontano et al., and that these limitations must be taught by the reference to support the rejection. However, Applicants are directed to MPEP § 2113, wherein it is clear that “[E]ven though product-by-process claims are limited by and defined by the process, determination of patentability is based on the product itself. The patentability of a product does not depend on its method of production. If the product in the product-by-process claim is the same as or obvious from a product of the prior art, the claim is unpatentable even though the prior product was made by a different process”, quoting In re Thorpe, 777, 227 USPQ 964,966 (Fed. Cir.1985). Products encompassed by the instant claims are regenerations of products known in the art, e.g., catalytic antibody molecules. Applicants have not shown how the recited process steps produce, in the claimed products, any structural features in the claimed products that distinguish over Tramontano et al.

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

Art Unit: 1636

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 32-39 and 43 stand rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement, for reasons of record set forth in Paper No. 15, mailed 7 May 2003.

At page 8 of the amendment, Applicants argue that the “architecture of antibody structure is well known in the art.” However, while the general structures of such receptors were known in the art, the precise function of a receptor is defined by its binding specificity. Since the art had a rather incomplete knowledge of structure-function relationships with respect to polypeptides and proteins, one of skill would not have been able to connect binding specificity, i.e., function, to structure, i.e., amino acid sequence, a priori. At pages 8 and 9, Applicants argue that the lack of a priori knowledge of the structures of the antibodies did not prevent them from obtaining catalytic antibodies according to the claims. However, the present rejection is for a lack of adequate written description, not lack of enabling disclosure. As such, the ability to find such an antibody is not in question. Applicants are claiming possibly all receptors, i.e., an extremely large genus. Clearly, adequate written description of all or nearly all possible receptors is not present.

At the paragraph bridging pages 9 and 10, Applicants argue that US Patents have issued with “[generic] claims for antibodies to novel targets with no requirement that the detailed structure of the antibody to such a target is described”, citing four examples. However, it must be noted that each application is examined on its own merits. Furthermore, each of the cited patents has claims drawn to narrowly defined antigens.

Art Unit: 1636

None of the cited issued claims are to antibodies to an open-ended set of antigens. As such, the cited claims are very different from the instant claims.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
